RAILROADS TURNING BACK CARS USED FOR SOLDIERS

Release of Troop Trains Expected to Relieve Passenger and Freight Service.

DIRECTOR MAKES STATEMENT.
B. L. Winchell Gives Figures Showing 949,000 Doughboys Carried on Specials During July, Last Month's Statistics Compiled.

Thousands of railroad coaches and Pullman cars which have been in use as troop trains practically since the declaration of war against Germany are to be turned back by the United States railroad administration for passenger use soon, it was announced last night by B. L. Winchell, regional director of the Southern region.

Demobilization of the army will practically be completed in a few weeks, Mr. Winchell said, and will relieve the railroads in part of the tremendous strain put upon them since the United States went to war. Cars and coaches which were used for troop trains will be released for passenger service and will enable the railroads to provide more adequate service for the general public.

Carried Many Troops.
In a statement given out yesterday the regional director said that throughout the war and during the months that have followed the armistice, large numbers of coaches and Pullman cars have been used for troop service. The end of hostilities in Europe did not mean that war work was necessary in connection with military activities, which will soon be at an end. Families and friends of soldiers found it necessary to visit a soldier and travel to and from military camps.

Using Old Equipment.
These activities are said to have kept cars constantly in use, and made it necessary that railroads bring out every available piece of old equipment. Railroad men say that lines which began the war with only a few coaches and Pullman cars, have now reached the ideal of all-steel modern cars and equipment were obliged to put into general service old and worn cars usually used only to meet the demands of excursions and other special occasions.

Speaking of the difficulties experienced during the war in keeping up equipment and machinery, Mr. Winchell said:

"Railroads found it almost impossible to obtain needed equipment during the war. For two years few cars have been built, because the demands for labor and materials were too great, and even where labor and materials were available the cost of producing new cars was almost prohibitive.

"In the past few weeks passenger as well as freight equipment has shown the effects of lack of attention during the emergency. Time is required to undo the harm done during the period of idleness, and all the railroads are striving to overcome the difficulty as quickly as possible."

LIBERATI BAND EXPECTED TO BE STATE FAIR FEATURE

Six Operas Will Be Sung at Night Performances and Other Events Staged.

Preparations for the Virginia State Fair in October, which are going forward include a stage which is being built against the grand stand especially for Liberati's concert band and his company of grand opera singers, which is the big entertainment feature of the fair this year.

The fact that Liberati heads the oldest and most noted musical organization of this character in the United States, and that this is the first time he has ever been induced to bring his company to any State fair in the country, lends special interest to this feature.

Six of the most famous of the big operas will be sung in costume by Liberati's artists at successive night performances which begin at 7:30 o'clock each night of the fair. Liberati's band begins to play at 10:30 each day in Industrial Hall and in the grand stand from 12 to 1 each day, and again from 2 until 5.

The fair gates open daily at 8 o'clock in the morning. The midway opens at 9 o'clock, and the automobile show begins at the same hour. Judging begins at 10 o'clock.

On the dustproof asphalt pavement midway there will be twenty big shows this year. Thirty-five railroad cars are required to carry the equipment and the personnel of the shows. Eighteen of the twenty shows are feature shows, and there are four of the latest riding devices. The circus and hippodrome features include besides standard attractions a number of new effects. The free acts start each afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.
